Editorial

Salvation truly is the sweetest thing that mortal ever found. What mercy and riches of grace to be called into fellowship with Jesus Christ! Glory, glory to the Lamb!

Jesus died to deliver man from sin's bondage and give us a more abundant, soul-satisfying life (John 10:10). He is "not willing that any should perish, but that all should come to repentance" (2 Peter 3:9) and have eternal life.

But Satan, being at war with God since the beginning of time, yet fights to extinguish the light of God from the earth and to keep the people in darkness.

Multitudes are feeling the depressive weight of darkness in our time, for iniquity is abounding all around the globe. Lovers of Satan have provided venues wherein sin is easily accessible. Since the 1960s, much of the populace has been weakened through an abundance of pleasures and soft, fleshly lifestyles, making them more susceptible to Satan's sinful enticements.

In this social milieu, many men have been weakened, women emboldened, and the dear children confused and hurting. The problem is a God-disconnect.

And dear Christian brother and sister, we would do well to search our hearts, lest in some way we have been affected. Jesus warned that near the end of time "because iniquity shall abound, the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved" (Matthew 24:12-13).

Be on thy guard lest your love for God wax cold—a slow, almost imperceivable process. These are truly very perilous times. We must keep ourselves "unspotted from the world" (James 1:27), and greatly need the power of God to endure to the end. Watch and pray!

I saw it unfolding. Yet, being in the greenness of youth, I understood not what I saw until years later. It came upon us suddenly, but had been planned many years prior.

These winds of change blew in the iconic 1960s; blew with such a velocity that we found ourselves tumbling about, uprooted and over-turned. When we regained our footing—or thought we had—we found ourselves in a strange, new social landscape.

By a slow, incremental creeping of changes throughout the 20th century, the minds and hearts of the people were conditioned for what had now burst upon our yet unwary view. This working was the brainchild of evil minds, of God-haters, of brute beasts raging to break down the bulwarks of moral norms in society.

The agenda? To create a secular society, free of “oppressive religious restraints.” This was to be accomplished by destroying the God-ordained family unit, using “free love” as a catalyst, among many others.

The dark kings of the earth had long arranged for a deluge of events to break forth in the sixties to reprogram the masses—the women’s “liberation” movement, the pill, legalizing abortion, easing of divorce laws, the normalization of homosexuality; as well as ads, music and movies that portrayed men as weak, and presented housewives and motherhood as oppressive and sexist. Time to march and break loose from the patriarchy!

I grew up during this paradigm shift—this storm of shifting morality. It was remarkable how quickly things changed! And changed to never again be the same.

Though engineered by but a small group, these powerful, obscenely rich elites were—and still are—intent on the destruction of real Christianity. Refusing to live under God’s authority, they are given over to Satan, and the scope of their vile living would shock our sensibilities.

Look around at the destruction everywhere. You are witnessing what happens to a people that cast off God’s rule. Now, decades later, disorder permeates every part of life, and, consequently, a cry of sorrow is arising from the inhabitants of the earth.

Many women have been brainwashed, resulting in numbers of radical feminists creeping out of the moral morass, desiring “sexual liberation” and breaking from the “stifling structure” of motherhood and home-making. If perchance they may consider having children in the future, some are currently freezing their eggs. How convenient! A step towards test-tube babies?

More could be said, but the fallout of this displacement has perhaps hurt women more than anyone—causing short-term, noncommittal relationships, leaving them with heartache, loneliness, and the difficulty of single motherhood. Those who promised them liberty knew full well it would be so—they were the planners and funders of these radical movements!

Consequently, men found themselves displaced—nothing like a feminist to emasculate a man! Bring down the “old patriarchal society!” Be gone with toxic manliness! And woe to the man who endeavours to take his God-given place as head of the home!

In recent years, men account for 75% of suicides. The United Kingdom attributes this to men losing their sense of identity in these out-of-order times where traditional roles have been decried.

These spirits are more than happy to infiltrate Christian assemblies. Get several feminists together and they may foment a revolution. They will be heard! One has to marvel that the very language and spirit is akin to what I was exposed to in the 1960s and 70s.

Despite the fact that the kings of the earth seek to obliterate the family, polls still declare that the happiest people are those in committed, monogamous, heterosexual relationships. Not surprising, for men and women were designed for such.

God's order, far from being oppressive, was instituted to ensure mankind's well-being and happiness. Don't be fooled by the culture's indoctrination. The feminists themselves are bringing on their own personal dissatisfaction. Better it would be for them—and for entire nations—if they would reject the culture and embrace the Bible as their guide.

These spirits are more than happy to infiltrate Christian assemblies. Get several feminists together and they may foment a revolution. They will be heard! One has to marvel that the very language and spirit is akin to what I was exposed to in the 1960s and 70s. This behaviour among professed holy women has no place in the living church of God.

I've known of young men who have waited to marry in order to find a woman who actually desired to fulfill the biblical mandate to bear children and guide the home; one who would allow their husband to be the head of the home, being in obedience, “that the word of God be not blasphemed” (Titus 2:5).

Wives, be aware, lest you unwittingly emasculate your own husbands by belittling him, being a bossy, controlling and nagging wife, or often challenging his decisions. Some may even refuse to obey their husbands. If he is asking you to do something sinful or against your conscience before God, then by all means, let him know you cannot in clear conscience comply. Otherwise, a blatant refusal to obey would be disobedience to the Word of God, and also harmful to the marriage relationship.

“Every wise woman buildeth her house: but the foolish plucketh it down with her hands.” Proverbs 14:1. “Ye wives, be in subjection to your own husbands.” 1 Peter 3:1.

And men are to treat their wives with respect, “being heirs together of the grace of life.” A husband and wife should discuss certain matters together, and he should give proper consideration to her desires, yet he is to have the final say. A man is to love and honour his wife, not lord over her.

When God's order is honoured, and both men and women fulfill their God-ordained roles, it makes for a healthy home life and all will be happier. 📖

THE PATH TO EMASCULATION

“CIVILIZATIONS DIE WHEN YOU EMASCULATE MEN.”

GATE 4

4. ISOLATE HIM FROM MENTORSHIP

Sever his ties with people who hold him to a high standard. Surround him only with “yes-men,” or people who are equally lost.

Without a “north star” or a community to keep him accountable, he will drift into nihilism.

GATE 3

3. REPLACE PURPOSE WITH CHEAP STIMULATION

Drown him in instant gratification—infinite scrolling, high dopamine digital entertainment, and substances. When the brain can get a “win” without any actual effort, the motivation to pursue real world goals evaporates.

GATE 2

2. FOSTER A VICTIM MENTALITY

This convinces him that he has no control over his life and that every setback is the fault of “the system,” bad luck, or his upbringing.

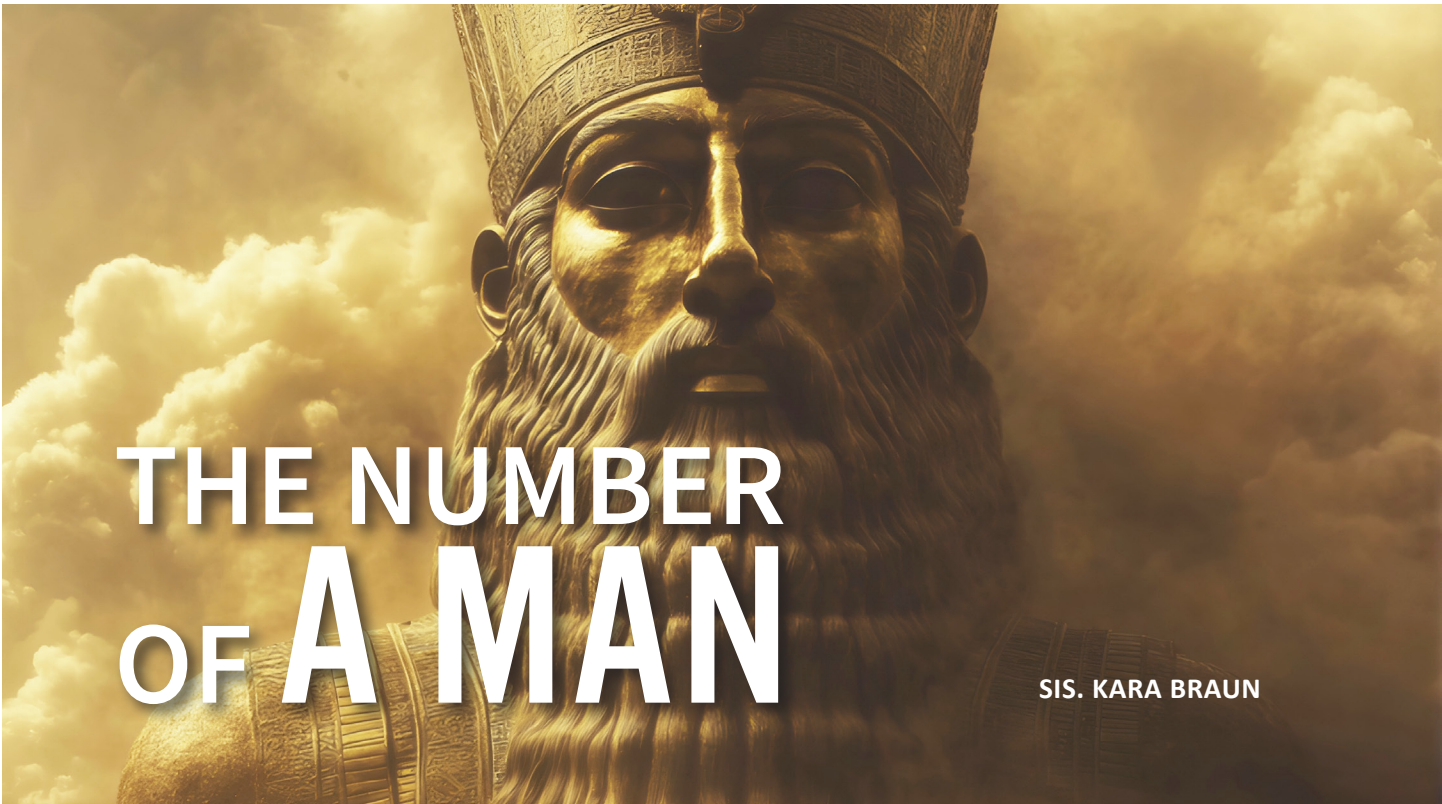

Once someone believes they are a permanent victim, they stop trying to improve, effectively destroying their own future from the inside out.

GATE 1

1. REMOVE ALL RESISTANCE

The quickest way to weaken a young man is to make his life easy. By removing challenges, risks, and the necessity of hard work, he's deprived of the chance to build psychological callouses, and will collapse at the first sign of real world friction, thus never learning how to fail and recover.

THE NUMBER OF A MAN

SIS. KARA BRAUN

IN THE BEGINNING, THERE WAS GOD: God all-knowing, God all-powerful, God the essence of beauty and light. God all by Himself spoke the universe into being, and God all by Himself ordered every star and atom. God all by Himself calibrated every system, and with precision He fine-tuned them in interdependence one upon another. Stars and planets synchronized in perfect harmony. Order looked out from every ecosystem and every creature—until man showed up and introduced chaos.

Man wasn't a problem before he became self-sufficient. In his original created state, man carried the image of God himself. It was a beautiful image, the Divine nature invested in humanity. The whole family of mankind was meant to carry the image of God—part of God inside each one, so that by the harmonious operation of them all together, God's beauty and order could be expressed in human flesh.

Sin, we know, broke the Divine order for humanity. Where the first image cast had been the image of God as man, the second image—cast by the words of the serpent into the imagination of Adam and Eve—was a perverted image, the image of man as God. When Adam and Eve partook, by their own human wisdom, of fruit God had forbidden, they partook of another image. The ingredients, one might say, were the same as the true image, but the order was fundamentally different; and in this false order, supremacy was born.

Supremacy has always lived in false order, and it has always been defined by the wisdom of man. Nimrod, instead of building God's city, built his own city and gathered the people unto himself. Were city-building and the gathering of communities wrong? No, but Nimrod's city rebelled against God's order and gathered the people to a carnal imagination. Some men found a plain in the land of Shinar and built themselves a tower. Their efforts resulted in Babel: why? They sought to make themselves a name. The wisdom of man organized entire systems—beastly systems—which gathered people through false imagery, from Babylon's Nebuchadnezzar proclaiming, “Is not this great Babylon which I have built?” to the kingdoms of Medo-Persia, Grecia, and Rome. The gathering of the people into economies was not wrong, but the exaltation of man in the place of God produced economies riddled with carnality and supremacy, where the exchange of gifting was defined and executed in carnal wisdom.

Beastly systems gained sophistication with the passing of time. Judaic heathenism took the very lineage God had chosen as a vehicle for the gospel message, and turned it into a man-made image by giving that lineage the authority to define the message rather than to merely steward a message defined by God.

God had instituted a seat of government for His true church. Popery made a man-made image by letting the message be defined by the man on the seat rather than the God who gave the seat.

Protestantism had already learned not to trust a lineage and not to trust a seat. There was something else God-given which was surely the one thing left for them to trust—God's provision for the household of God to hold in check the overreach of gifts in its midst—the voice of the people. And in their zeal to fight false imagery and free the gifts of God in their midst, they walked straight from one supremacist image into another. They too fell into human wisdom and arguably enabled the most pernicious beastly system yet known.

The book of Revelation, describing this beast with the lamb-like appearance and the dragon mouth, identifies it by the mark it carries: “And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark...Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man.” (Rev. 13:16, 18).

We cite examples from history, not because we believe we are or have become a beastly system. The message that gathered us and has kept us together is not a message that exalted man or made provision for the flesh. But we do believe we are in hand-to-hand combat with a beastly system that combines all the angles of attack and all the false imagery that has materialized throughout history into one seven-headed supremacist monster. And we do believe this monstrous system has made every effort to infiltrate our thinking and to requisition our voice. We are vulnerable if we do not understand how the beast works.

“Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils,” warns the prophet, “for wherein is he to be accounted of?” (Isa. 2:22). “And the loftiness of man shall be bowed down, and the haughtiness of men shall be made low: and the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day. And the idols he shall utterly abolish... In that day a man shall cast his idols of silver, and his idols of gold, which they made each one for himself to worship, to the moles and to the bats; To go into the clefts of the rocks, and into the tops of the ragged rocks, for fear of the Lord, and for the glory of his majesty, when he ariseth to shake terribly the earth” (Isa. 2:17, 18, 20, 21). “Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men” (Hosea 10:13). “Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be the man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord.” (Jer. 17:5).

It is God's church that we are a part of, and God without our wisdom is capable both of organizing it and of keeping it clean. God certainly works through the agency of man, yet His work is not defined by men's success or failure. Noah built the ark, but he had to follow heaven's instructions. Moses led the people, but only in the direction given by the pillar of fire. The angel ministry of Matt. 13:47-50 have the sacred and stupendous authority of holding the gospel net, drawing it to shore in their hands, and sorting through its contents, yet even they do not define the net, for the net preexisted them and will outlast them. We are not owners of the prophecy. We are stewards and must give an account of our stewardship.

If there has been a sin in our midst, it has been the sin of self-sufficiency and presumption. It has been leaning on man-made wisdom instead of the wisdom of the Holy Ghost, and too often discounting spiritual gifts through which the Holy Ghost was working to check us.

Until the voices of human wisdom are quieted, until we are still and know that He is God, we cannot hope to hear His direction. If we would have God's anointing, we must rid ourselves of flesh, for “upon man's flesh shall it not be poured”

The gospel net being drawn in to shore has been handled unilaterally where it was designed to be held by a body of ministers capable of challenging and correcting one another. And the people themselves, lean in prayer and spiritual power, have exchanged spiritual agency for external form. Not all have given

THE LIE THAT REWIRED A GENERATION

Simone de Beauvoir, Judith Butler, Shulamith Firestone—each one planted the same idea: Womanhood is a trap. Marriage is oppression. Motherhood is a burden. Femininity is a prison.

So women were encouraged to trade loyalty for independence, modesty for exposure, family for career, virtue for validation, and covenant for personal autonomy.

If God created woman with purpose, feminism declared war on that purpose. And the West applauded while the foundation cracked.

A Culture Full of People Who Played the Game and Lost

Walk through any city today and you'll see the fallout. This is not progress. It is a relational famine. We didn't "grow beyond" marriage. We abandoned it.

And the loneliness stings worst during the very season meant for warmth and covenant.

- You can't replace a home with an apartment.
- You can't replace a husband with a salary.
- You can't replace children with career milestones.
- You can't replace covenant with personal freedom.

You cannot despise the home and then cry about being lonely inside it.

If God created woman with purpose, feminism declared war on that purpose.

- The Boss-Babe Mirage
- The culture sold a dream: "Be strong. Be ambitious. Be independent. Men will still come."

But here's what actually happened: The traits that make a woman effective in the boardroom—dominance, competition, assertiveness—are the very traits that repel the men she desires.

Not because men are intimidated, but because men are exhausted. They fight the world all day. They refuse to come home and fight their spouse all night.

So these women aren't "too much" for men. They're mismatched for marriage. They bought the feminist lie, built a life around it, and now sit surrounded by the trophies of a victory that cost them the one thing they cannot manufacture later—a family.

Feminism didn't empower them. It exiled them from the very blessings they were created to enjoy.

Holiday Loneliness Has a Spiritual Origin

This ache intensifies in December because God designed marriage and family to shield the human heart from isolation. Scripture says, "It is not good that the man should be alone” (Genesis 2:18) It is not good for the woman either. It is not good for the home. It is not good for the culture.

Marriage was God’s answer to loneliness before the fall. Feminism inverted that truth and promised freedom. But freedom without covenant leads to emptiness.

No office celebration can match the warmth of a family table. No salary bonus can replace the sound of children running through the house. No empowerment slogan can drown out the pain of a life lived alone.

Men Aren’t Intimidated—They’re Walking Away

Western women were told they could postpone marriage indefinitely because “the right man will come.” But the right man is no longer waiting. He’s checking out. Or checking his passport.

Colombia, Thailand, Brazil, the Philippines, Ukraine—places where femininity is still honored, marriage is still sacred, and loyalty still means something.

Men aren’t escaping responsibility. They’re escaping contempt.

When your culture treats men as predators, fools, or obstacles, they will go where manhood is respected and expect strong husbands.

You cannot scorn femininity and expect faithful wives.

You cannot treat marriage as optional and expect stable homes.

You cannot reject God’s order and avoid the consequences.

This crisis is not primarily political or relational. It is spiritual. And the only way back is repentance.

Men reclaiming responsibility.

Women rediscovering virtue.

Homes restored through covenant under Christ, not contract under the state.

When the home rises, the culture stabilizes. When the home collapses, everything else follows.

There Is Still a Path Back

The lawyer in her apartment isn’t hopeless. Neither is the man who has given up. Neither is the young woman scrolling through dating profiles looking for something real. Neither is the boy who has never seen a healthy family.

God’s design still works. It always has. And it will again—if we return to it.

- Return to biblical masculinity.
- Return to biblical femininity.
- Return to biblical marriage.

Feminism didn’t empower them. It exiled them from the very blessings they were created to enjoy.

marriage is possible.

This Isn’t a Dating Problem—It’s a Discipleship Problem

The collapse of marriage is not random. It is the predictable result of rejecting the Designer.

You cannot mock masculinity and room, but enough have for the atmosphere to be affected. And God has forced us into a struggle designed so that ALL flesh would fail.

Where has our doctrine failed? We have not, generally speaking, taught falsehoods for doctrine. Our core, defining beliefs remain scripturally sound. But carelessness in the pulpit has allowed flesh to be mingled with the administration of truth, and carelessness in the pew has interpreted truth through flesh-filled ears.

Wherever flesh has gained a foothold, death has followed, for truths held in the flesh are as deadly as falsehoods. God, deliver us from muddying the waters of truth with the footprint of man!

“Be silent, O flesh, before the Lord, and before the glory of His majesty.” God is speaking, but there is a quietness of spirit which we must practice if we would hear His voice. Until the voices of human wisdom are quieted, until we are still and know that He is God, we cannot hope to hear His direction.

If we would have God’s anointing, we must rid ourselves of flesh, for “upon man’s flesh shall it not be poured” (Exodus 30:32). 📱

The man who is in conformity with this world is not the man who understands it best, or who admires its beauties most; nor can he adapt himself best to all its circumstances. He is too much a slave of the things he sees to look into the meaning of them; too much shut up in the habits of the society into which he is thrown, to have any pow-

That image and superscription will vary in each new age, in each new locality. It is the very nature of the world to be continually changing. That is the reason why it is so ignominious a thing for a man to be conformed to it; he must become merely a creature of today; he must be fluctuating, capricious, insincere—a leaf carried about by every gale, floating down every current. How is it poser of entering into what lies beyond. The word “conformed” implies that he takes his form from the things about him, that they are the mould into which his mind is cast.

Now this St. Paul will not for an instant admit to be the form which any man is created to bear. Man is created in the image of God, and the form of his mind is to be derived from Him and not from the things which are put in subjection under Him.

The heathen was resisting the conscience which told him that he was God's offspring, and the very things he saw which testified to the invisible power of God in worshiping and serving the creature more than the Creator. But we who have been redeemed out of this worship are striving far more directly and consciously against this spirit.

We are choosing a false way when we admit the world to govern and fashion our minds according to its pleasure, when we submit to receive its image and superscription.

sible that such a one can know anything of the will of God, which is fixed and eternal? What signifies it that you give to such a one the Bible and persuade him it is a divine book? You may persuade him of that as easily as of anything else. If it is the current opinion, of course he receives it until the fashion alters, and then he will scoff at it. But while he embraces it, what does he gather from it? Just what his worldly spirit wishes to gather and no more.

The deliverance from all this is transformation, and such transformation, instead of unfitting a man for the world, is that which alone can enable him to live in it, to appreciate the worth of it, to exercise an influence over it. It was this which enabled the prophet to see the trees and the floods breaking forth into singing; which enabled St. Paul to become all things to all men; which enabled St. John to see the kingdom of God and of His Christ emerging out of the kingdoms of this world. For

The process of this transformation is the renewing of the mind. Such a phrase at once suggests the change which takes place when the foliage of spring covers the bare boughs of winter. The substance is not altered, but it is quickened. The alteration is the most wonderful that can be conceived of, but it all passes within. The power once given works secretly, probably amidst many obstructions from sharp winds and keen frosts. Still, that beginning contains in it the sure prophecy of final accomplishment. The man will be renewed according to the image of his Creator and Father, because the Spirit of his Creator and Father is working in him. 🖼️

PASSION

“Passion” comes from the Latin “passio” which means “suffering” and “endurance.”

People think that following your passion means doing something you love, when it really means finding something that you are willing to suffer for.

ENDURING HARDSHIP

What does it matter if external circumstances are hard? Why should they not be! If we give way to self-pity and indulge in the luxury of misery, we banish God’s riches from our own lives and hinder others from entering into His provision. Self-pity obliterates God and puts self-interest upon the throne. It opens our mouths to spit out murmurings.

Why shouldn’t we go through heartbreaks? Through these doorways God is opening up ways of fellowship with His Son. Most of us fall and collapse at the first grip of pain. We sit down on the threshold of God’s purpose and die away of self-pity, and all so-called Christian sympathy will aid us to our death-bed. But God will not. He comes with the grip of the pierced hand of His Son and says: “Enter into fellowship with Me; arise and shine.” If through a broken heart God can bring His purposes to pass in the world, then thank Him for breaking your heart.

Oswald Chambers,
My Utmost for His Highest

Bro. Peter Tovstiga

On the afternoon of April 2, 2026, angels carried our beloved Bro. Peter Tovstiga, age 70, to Abraham’s bosom.

He possessed a tender heart towards God from his childhood. At the age of 14, he obtained a deep salvation experience which carried him through the temptations of youth, the trials of middle age, and the challenges of his senior years with glowing victory. With his heart burning with holy fire, youthful lusts called in vain, for he knew that all besides God was vanity.

In his mid-teens, he discovered church of God books, which ignited an inextinguishable desire in his bosom to witness firsthand the glories experienced by Bro. Warner.

Great was his joy when he discovered what he had longed for in finding the present work of restoration of God’s church. For more than 50 years, he maintained an uninterrupted, electrifying excitement about the church of God. It was common to hear him exhort his sons about possessing a vision of the church.

Bro. Peter delighted in helping people and touched thousands of lives with his heart full of love and compassionate care. He had an uncanny gift to make everyone feel very special.

Happy were the host of people who were blessed to sit at his table and partake of his generous and delightful bounty. It is difficult to imagine how even Gaius of old could have been a more generous host.

Truly, he was a lover of God, a lover of life, a very talented artist, a lover of nature, a lover of people, and a father to many.

An exemplary Christian, this pillar in the church of God will be sorely missed by a multitude of brothers and sisters in Christ who testify to being indelibly impacted by his life, not to mention the many friends, patients, and community members who will miss his presence.
